True Courage

By Charles Filmore

True courage is courage as it functions in truth. Every faculty has a two-fold action – within and without. As we analyse the various ideas that enter into our everyday life, we find that they are all a duality; each with a true and a false side, a positive and a negative side. Thus even our virtues seem negative when separated from the Absolute. In considering the faculties of mind, we get the best concept of them if we work from the Absolute, separating each faculty from relative conditions, and drawing it to an expression in our mind unrelated to other faculties.

True courage is not bravado. It is not “nerve,” nor is it indifference to suffering. Courage is not generally estimated at its true value, because we do not understand its spiritual quality. True spiritual courage will lift us above every hinderance, even that of an accusing conscience that refuses to remit past sins and keeps us in a state of self-condemnation and remorse. True courage looks to spirit for the solution of every problem.

We see this idea illustrated in the Scripture lesson from Daniel. We are told how in the lion’s den the prophet keeps his windows open towards Jerusalem and prayed three times a day. That is the key to the whole situation. Jerusalem in man is his spiritual consciousness. This is a consciousness different from the misguided conscience that makes “cowards of us all”. The unenlightened conscience is a human thing the result of false education and warped morality.

Spiritual consciousness is of God and the universe and it is established when we open the windows of our soul to these higher forces. In the scripture Daniel prayed three times a day – the number three being a mystical number. It has back of it the trinity of mind, idea and expression; Father, Son and Holy Spirit; God, Christ, Man. All these ideas run through the scriptures and it has a spiritual significance. We pray to God our Father, to Christ (the indwelling I AM and to Jesus (our true self manifest). This means that we pray or affirm the divine trinity, which we idealise as capable of expression in us through our divine sonship.

It makes a difference whether your windows are open to the outer world or to Jerusalem, the inner world. Daniel had understanding; he was a master of spiritual things and a good example to us. We need not be afraid of the lions in our path if we pray with our windows open to Jerusalem. This appears mystical, but it is very simple. When we get the true interpretation we find that Daniel is divine judgement, implanted in us from the beginning. We are tasked with following spiritual law rather than the edicts of King Intellect.

The usual penalty for opposing man made laws is savage criticism and finally social extinction. But cooperation with spiritual law leads to better things; the mouths of the lions are closed and you eventually go up higher, as Daniel did.

Ecstasy of Chaos

By Robert Graves

When the immense drugged Universe explodes
In a cascade of unendurable colour
And leaves us gasping naked
This is no more than ecstasy of chaos
Hold fast with both hands to that royal love
Which alone, as we know certainly, restores Fragmentation into true being

King Intellect frequently makes laws that ignore divine wisdom; he often regrets his edicts and is glad when the higher wisdom helps him out. Thus if you understand the redeeming power of Spirit you need not suffer the results of ignorance. In the case of Daniel we can plainly see that the law that the king made was the result of outside suggestion. The officers of the king's court were in sense consciousness and therefore opposed to Daniel. The officers represent the mental attitudes of the personality, which frequently incite one to make rules of life not in harmony with spiritual law. The result is hard experiences, conditions that are difficult to meet and that appear to be punishment. If one knows the divine resource one need not suffer.

We know that the invariableness of the law we shall reap as we sow. The supreme dictator of all power is mind. When you learn how to pull up thought weeds before they come to maturity you have attained a power that belongs to the masters. You can put a quietus on the effects of the law that you have bought into action and destroy all the seeds of error thought by your word when you have come to a place of dominion in spirit. To us God has given all power; but in order to realise our power we must detach it from the realm of sense effects. We are constantly making rules in life and coming under their dominion, not realising that dominion over all things is ours. We come into the consciousness of mastery through prayer and meditation. The divine law sends its angels and closes in our behalf the mouths of all devouring elements (lions), which consume those who are not in tune with spirit.

Before man can enter into his rightful place in the universe, he must know the character of ideas as he knows the rules of punctuation and mathematics. He must know what ideas to cultivate when he wishes to obtain certain results. There is a dynamic power back of every idea, and man must estimate the power of his ideas as he does the voltage of a dynamo. Fear is opposed to courage and it paralyzes. You have probably heard a person say that they were 'scared stiff'. Do nothing that will set up in the consciousness the fear state of mind because you cannot tell where it will manifest in the body. You can meet any situation with divine courage if you align yourself to the spiritual worlds.

As they go on in spiritual development, those who have been educated according to the race thought sometimes find that the old fear states break up in the subconscious mind and come to the surface and accountable fears are felt. These are the lions in the den of the subconscious. They cannot hurt you if you are true to your God.

It is not always a fear that robs us of our courage; sometimes it is a duty. Do you courageously meet every one of your obligations, or do you leave some duties to other people?

Fear can be eliminated through cultivating the spiritual presence. We do not need to go back to the time of Daniel to see opportunities for great spiritual courage. If you are afraid of the opinions of anyone, if you are cowed by any proud personality, you have need of the courage of Daniel, the courage of Jesus Christ who made for himself the highest affirmations even when these opposed the church dignitaries and temporal rulers. Be fearless and courageous enough to make the same proclamations for yourself.

Did Christ not say "He that believeth on me, the works I do shall he do also; and the greater works than these shall he do"?

We cannot do these works without first placing ourselves in the same relation to the spiritual worlds that he occupied. Spiritual man is God manifest but it takes courage to declare oneself a son or daughter of God.

Take up a definite statement of Truth daily, and by your word free yourself from the old bondage of fear. Affirm:

"I am no longer afraid of the opinions of people. I am no longer bound by a cowardly conscience. The fears of the past have no power over me. I stand at one with the spiritual realm and in the fearlessness of the Almighty".

The Number One

by Shirley Laflin

One is a number of great importance in that it is a solid, uncomplicated shape. It is a building block of the sign of the cross being 2/3rd of the whole. It joins heaven and earth and can ground you. It can make up many other signs, symbols and numbers creating a foundation or building block, or become an integral part of many other things.

It's pure simplicity of shape means that it resounds clearly through many dimensions rather like a bell which reverberates, or a stone thrown into water causing the ripples to fan out. The sum of all this means that the number 1 gets its message across easily and clearly by cutting through the dimensions. Its message therefore is one of allowing you to clear yourself, cut through a medium easily and quickly, being razor sharp, getting your message across to an audience clearly, thinking clearly, writing clearly, and being clear and organised and uncluttered in your word and actions.

To use it place it in your mind's eye for 5 seconds or more (or hear it or feel it). Concentrate on it and hold the intention of using it to help you in whatever way you wish for the highest good. This is a symbol of great depth and meaning and can be used with great ease and clarity and is God's gift to all who wish to use it in this way.
