A Lifetime Understanding Nature by Ruth Cook

As a young girl I spent many happy hours with my grandfather in his garden. We would play all manner of games with the garden folk, subjects of Lady Gaia, queen of the garden world.

Grandfather is long gone. He spent his life working with the land as I have (principally in horticulture). A lifetime of working with plants has made me realise the deeper relevance of these simple childhood games, for they pave the way towards a time when human consciousness is no longer separate from that of the plant, animal and mineral kingdoms.

We already exchange our human energies with the plant kingdom and mankind has always had a close relationship with those plants that he grows for his own sustenance. This is a two-way process; man gives out energy and by eating, receives it back, completing the resolution of a natural cycle, one that existed ever since we first ceased to be hunters and learned to nurture the vegetable kingdom.

Over many millennia humanity has developed a good understanding of the mechanics of the plant world but not the underlying energies. For example the subtle energy of the plant kingdom has the ability to continue long after the individual plant has died and dissipated. This is the reason that herbal medicine remains so powerful long after the plant itself is dead. It allows a remnant of that plant to maintain the subtle body, or power, which was there originally.

The New Age offers us the opportunity to accelerate this understanding and form this deeper relationship with Gaia allowing us to interact with the natural world at an ethereal / energetic level. This deep and profound union will amount to more than just acknowledging the passage of the seasons, or being aware of changing weather patterns, it will be a relationship that will nourish the energies of both humanity and the natural worlds.

Conversations with the spirits of the elemental worlds would be more than just children's games, indeed the interaction of elemental and human energies, will enable humanity to work as co-creators with the natural world, with ideas of thought from spirit working within matter, to form the shapes of nature.

Irrespective of whether we live in an urban environment or in the country we can begin to enter in to these new partnerships by simply projecting our awareness and appreciation of our home planet Earth. Start by creating a powerful feeling of energy, growth and life and project a feeling of radiant sunshine, (this is the vital ingredient of energy the plant kingdom most needs). Exist as if your consciousness has already connected with that of Gaia and realise that you live your life immersed in within a world of radiant beauty, a living beauty that is sensate and conscious. As such it needs to feel loved, cherished, honoured and appreciated.

As we evolve over the next decade, the concept of being able to merge our human energies with those of our home the Earth will become much more commonplace. The vegetable kingdom has a special role to play because it is the great planetary oxygenator and links the mineral and animal kingdoms. During this time of transition its energetic rhythm will remain close to that of the Earth and in so doing it offers us the chance to re-focus our human energies, taking them back towards the natural rhythms of the planet.

Planetary transition will see the demise of anthropogenically derived cycles and the re-emergence of one cosmic planetary rhythm for all aspects of consciousness (including the human kingdom). We are a part of a living nature, the point at which nature becomes conscious of herself.

As the organ of consciousness on the living Earth, it is time to acknowledge our responsibilities as divine spiritual beings and work with a sense of reverence for the welfare of the Earth and all life upon it.

Book Review: Haunted Pubs of the South West by Ian Addicoat

This book presents a fascinating read about the ghosts found in public houses throughout England's South West.

Take for instance the George and Pilgrim pub in Glastonbury. A ghostly Monk back in the 1970's was said to have sat on the bed of a guest and calmly spoke about Queen Elizabeth before disappearing. Another very haunted building that we find in this book is the Jamaica Inn at Bolventor, Launceston in Cornwall. The author describes how he verbally communicates with the ghosts that haunt this property.

Friendly ghosts might be found at the King William pub in Bristol, where spooks are often heard 'calling out' to members of staff when no other people have been in the building. At the Old Road Inn in Plymouth Devon, the ghostly resident puts out the rubbish bins.

They say that ghosts can't harm you, but try telling that to the proprietor's wife of the Farmers Arms pub in Wolfardinsworthy in Devon. His wife was thrown forcibly from a chair and on another occasion was stroked by an invisible hand as she lay in bed. A member of staff was also hit on the head by a glass bowl. All these events seemed to stem from when the proprietor found an old hidden well on his 13th century property.

To promote an event or submit a contribution to the newsletter email Robert at newsletter@wessexresearchgroup.org or log on to www.wessexresearchgroup.org

Then there is the ghost of a young girl seen at the First and Last Inn at Sennen Cornwall, she looked directly at a startled observer, smiled then slowly disappeared.

One figure who seems to pop up as a ghost more than any other in all these haunted pubs, is Judge Jeffreys. As a judge he sentenced many innocent people to their deaths during the Bloody Assizes that followed the Monmouth Rebellion of 1685. Meditational Messages from the Mountain of Scrolls by Shakti Prem

Many have come to your world with love of purest form. Some of you see and hear us. Those who do not are not awakened yet and deny our existence.

You are all from many places far beyond your world from many different stars and planets. Like us you are extra terrestrial but we are all, from one source of energy.

Spread amongst the universe and omniverse and beyond, where all has begun and ended, ended and begun, your souls have chosen your paths before you even were conceived. We are the ones you seek amongst you in your world, you ask us for help with the planet you call Earth.

By saving yourselves, you save the Earth. Bare witness to recent events, the earth talks - listen to it feel it be at one with it and only then can you help to heal it. Your work is only just beginning my friends.
