May 2012

May and a busy month of events ahead. May 5th 2012 marks a new annual event; International Dowsing Day. The day which was also the birthday of the late dowser Hamish Miller, is supported by the British Society of Dowsers. For further information log on to www.britishdowsers.org

The Charge of the Human Body - Static Electricity By Miroslav Provod

For many years I have researched the relationships between matter (living and non-living) and energy charges; notably static electricity. Static electricity is inherent within nature with every compound having a charge of static electricity that can be controlled by external influences. Furthermore when individual charges make contact they coalesce into a single joint charge which becomes the sum of their energy values. When energy transfer takes place, the transfer also affects the chemical properties of compounds that make up living and non-living structures. Water flows represent one of the powerful sources of static electricity, from underground springs through streams, rivers, to the ocean currents.

What might the impact of static electricity be on the workings of the human body? We know that each cell has a cell membrane with its own charge. The mitochondria charge the membrane through ion channels by the transformation of chemical energy from food into static electricity and all the cells form a common charge. I am suggesting that the charge within the cells of the human body can be increased in ways other than by the action of mitochondria, through physical contact with a larger external charge. For example it is known that Indians can increase their cellular energy by creating a thread with their arms around the trunk of healthy and strong trees.

One can perform a simple experiment to increase the static charge of the human body. Wrap a wooden chair with several turns of half-inch plastic hose which is then filled with flowing water. Sit a willing assistant on the chair and at ten minute intervals measure the increase in the aura surrounding his or her body. I do this using a dowsing rod. My findings suggest that the radius of the assistant's aura increases by up to 110cm, but no further; the reasons for which are presently unknown. The dowsing rod reliably indicates the radius of the aura and the spacing of zones and the interzones, but cannot determine the electrical charge or optimal voltage charge of the assistant's body.

It is my belief that the people of ancient cultures knew the optimal value of the human body. To me it is evident from the number and size of the megaliths or from the Jerusalem Pond ("waiting for an angel to adjust the water"), and many other buildings. Our science tells us that the body can handle an upper limit; the point where the body self ignites. We also know that many different health ailments are associated with static electrical charges but we don't yet know what the optimum charge might be for health and well being.

With this enhanced understanding of the interaction between natural forces could it be that ancient people also knew more about the energies relating to acupuncture and homeopathy. With respect to the latter we know that there is a multiple dilution of the original substance until there is not a single molecule in the final solution. What then of the impacts of shaking? The so called dynamization when the solution becomes static. How much do we really know about the properties of water? The official science still stubbornly refuses to admit the possibility that water could be able to sort its internal recording "memory".

In many respects modern man has developed a wonderful technology, yet we are still not able to understand many physical phenomena and processes that underpin the workings of the natural world. Have we then lost more than we have gained or is it that our present understanding has deviated from natural law?

Our ancestors knew the energetic value of buildings, and also knew the optimal value of the charge of the body. Although we walk on the Moon, we still live in the "houses of cancer" and can not detect and identify in any way the cause, why these houses - as opposed to absolutely identical buildings in close proximity - have a statistically higher incidence of multiple cancer disease. We treat the consequences, without trying to "cure" the cause. Log on to www.miroslavprovod.com for further information about Miroslav's research.

Psychic Protection Technique

A Visualisation by Mark-Age

The following visualisation can be used daily in your meditations to protect yourself and others through your I Am Self and Light Body.

Build the White Christ Light in the form of a web or cocoon around the physical body.

Visualise an etheric rope of spiritual energy.

With it create a spiral beehive from the feet to the head.

Wind the thread counterclockwise, about one to one and a half feet from the physical body.

Seal off the feet and continue to build the web layer by layer until it reaches the head. Do not seal this off but attach the stem of the enclosure to the Fountainhead, the ultimate source. Think of it as a leaf attached to the vine, from which it receives its nourishment and life energy.

Most important is the realisation that this shield is punctured every time one allows a negative or destructive thought to penetrate one's conscious acceptance. It is also punctured by outside forces that seem to be stronger than the web of protection of the God Self. Each puncture must be consciously resealed by the individual.

At first, for the sake of good practice and discipline, it is a good idea to quiet oneself and to rebuild the entire sheath in exactly the same manner. This should be done first thing in the morning and last thing each night. After sufficient practice, it can be done almost instantaneously, resealing the leakage by merely thinking it to be done.

Think of the self as always being in this cone shaped, spiral essence, which has a substance that is as effective and solid as material matter.

We can also use this technique to wrap another person, a group, a geographic area or the entire planet in a cocoon of light protection. We give thanks to our Father-Mother God for this divine protection. So be it. For further information about the work of Mark-Age log on to www.thenewearth.org/markage.html

Book Review: The Natural Death Handbook

Produced by the Natural Death Centre

Completely revised and expanded into a boxed set of three books, the new handbook not only provides a comprehensive guide to inexpensive green and family organised funerals, biodegradable mail order coffins, natural burial grounds, caring for the dying at home, living wills and updated insight into the hidden world of dying and death; it also includes a compelling and ground breaking book of essays on the subject by some of the best writers in the field. The trilogy is completed by the latest directory of recommended funeral directors and natural burial grounds in the UK. Log on to the web site of the Natural Death Centre www.naturaldeath.org.uk for further information.
