Re-uniting with the Light Body

By Julie Sullivan

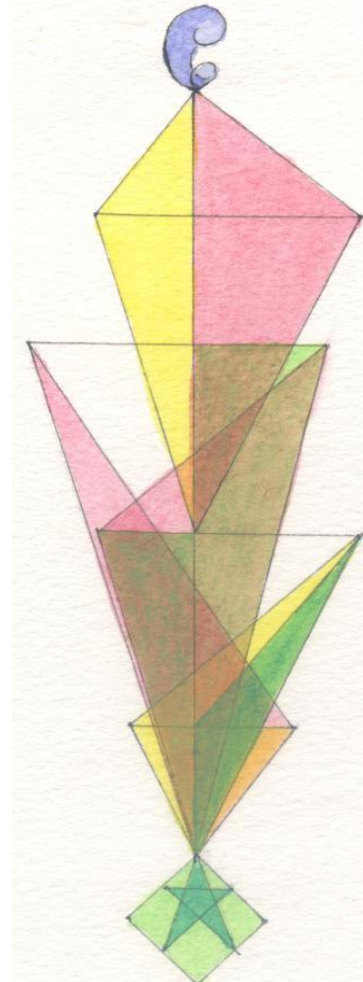

One of the evolutionary objectives for the Aquarian age (the next two thousand years or so), is for the Earth and all its inhabitants to reconnect with their light bodies.

We all have a light body. It is an aspect of the self (sometimes called the higher self) that exists outside of the physical plane in a higher dimensional frequency. If we were to meet our higher selves (as we might meet another person in physical form) we would encounter a wonderful human being; someone who exuded unconditional love and compassion; someone untroubled and unfazed by the challenges of Earthly life that shape our thoughts and emotions.

The light body is the indestructible essence of the spiritual self. The decay of the physical body is marked by linear time, but the spiritual self is imperishable. It has always been with us through this, and every other lifetime, growing through the experiences of each Earthly incarnation.

To cope with a physical life on Earth we have developed physical, mental, emotional and astral bodies. These are aspects of what might be described as the Earthly or lower self. The lower bodies are borne out of the light body but in life we tend to forget about the higher aspect of the self until when through death we leave the physical and reunite with it.

The time of existing in a state of separateness from our light bodies is ending. The energetic template that supports third dimensional life on Earth is being upgraded to a higher frequency, one that supports the union of the higher self with the four Earthly bodies. This process of re-unification has been underway for many decades and during the winter solstice of 2012 the Earth received a tremendous amount of universal energy to help it raise itself to a higher energetic vibration and so help it with the process of re-connecting with its own light body.

Above: the Intelligence of Gaia (by Jay Risdon)

Scientist's estimate that around 5% of the universe consists of matter and with a planet as dense as the Earth, one can only imagine the amounts of energy that are required to raise it up. Significantly the elemental kingdoms and the beings that manage the energy systems and processes of life on Earth are now working to these higher energetic vibrations. Humans can also help the Earth for by re-uniting with our light bodies we help raise the overall vibration on our home planet.

Human beings and the Earth have been evolving together for many millions of years. As we and the Earth reunite with our respective light bodies we will begin to develop a far deeper relationship with our home planet and understand that everything is connected at a subtle energetic level. In evolutionary terms we and the Earth are ending our descent into matter and are beginning the journey back to the light. As the beings tasked with developing self consciousness we become stewards for the new Earth helping other life forms (through our compassion) to develop their consciousness.

The Mystery of Ley Lines

By Nigel Blair

Firstly what is a ley-line? The word ley has a variety of meanings, one of the most widely known is a forest clearing, this term having been used from ancient times. The word is usually taken to mean a straight line between ancient sites or sites of some interest denoting at least energy centres if not some ancient stone circle or standing stone.

The idea of ley-lines started with a book by Alfred Watkins called "The Old Straight Track". It was first published in 1925. Alfred studied what were traders tracks identified by the place names, white or salt or chip and so on. From place names he went on to mark points; prehistoric mounds, castle keeps, beacon hills, wells with traditional names, old churches especially those on ancient mounds or another prehistoric site, ancient crosses, alignments of track-ways, fords, traditionally named tree groups or single trees, hill side notches, crossroads, zig-zags and other road junctions.

He found that they formed a pattern and he was on his horse overlooking a magnificent view from a hill-top in the Malvern Hills in Herefordshire when he had a vision that these ancient sites were also linked-up by a sort of network of light; as he saw it there was a parallel network of light above the one that he saw on the ground linking them up as if there was joined by some sort of spiritual energy.

Alfred didn't say very much on the spiritual energies in his books, he concentrated on laying the groundwork and amassing the geographical evidence for leys, because he realised that the degree of coincidence that would be required to explain all ley-lines would be very high.

Following his death, the Second World War came along and people rather forgot about leys and after the war it became a good deal more difficult to go onto peoples land and a lot of old footpaths were lost. Watkins' work was rescued from oblivion by John Michel in the late 1960's.

Book Review: The Cerne Giant. Landscape, Gods and the Stargate

By Peter Knight

The author's seventh book is concerned with his groundbreaking discoveries about the famous Dorset Hill figure.

The book covers the giant's sacred landscape, the gods of the Iron Age, fertility folklore, phallicism, alignments with the sun and the stars, the candidates for possible identity of the giant, the issue of it's age and the landscape setting in relation to other sites including the giant's connection with the Egyptian stargate.

Typical of Peter's books this volume is packed with information, including maps, diagrams, photographs and star maps showing his discoveries in relation to the heavens and the Egyptian Stargate.

Many mysteries are discussed and many are resolved in this informative and interesting book. For further information log on to www.stoneseecker.net
