VOLUME 10, ISSUE 2.

February 2015

February 2015 brings the welcome news that the Library of Avalon is re-launching having been flooded out last year. For further information about the re-launch event contact the library by emailing librarian@libraryofavalon.org.uk

The month also sees the opening of a new healing centre in Glastonbury. The Bohemia Healing centre offers Reflexology and Reiki and hopes to be a venue for workshops initially for reiki attunement, mindfulness classes and Anxiety management. Contact Jacqui on 07516816915 for further information.

The latest addition to the on-line digital lecture archive <http://www.wessexresearchgroup.org/digital.html> is From the First Pyramid to the Fall of Troy. The Facts Behind the Myth by Tom Chetwynd.

Harmonics and the Origins of Colour Vision

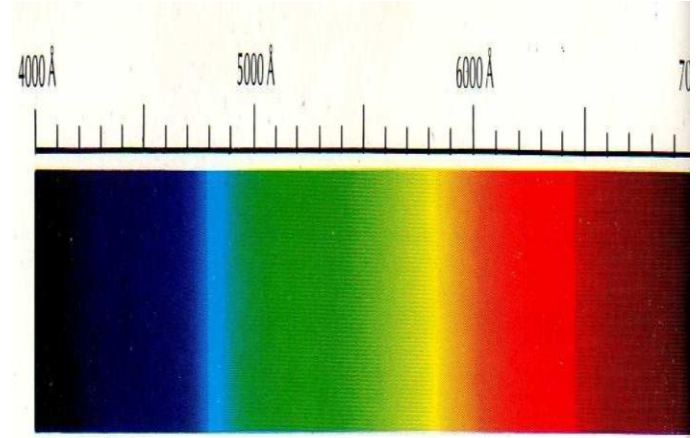

By George Essence

When Hydrogen atoms absorb the sun's rays they then produce ultra violet ("uv") waves at one special wavelength, like an undirected laser. Our eyes probably evolved colour recognition from this radiation.

Colour is a subjective experience. Rainbows are bands of distinct colours created by our own eyes inside our own brains. Raindrops do split sunlight up into a continuous spread of wavelengths. Our eyes pick out a small bit of this spread and convert it into distinct bands of the rainbow.

The question is, how is this done, and why pick on this particular small range? It turns out that there is a strong link with the harmonic relationships of music and those of colour.

A photograph by Eastmann Kodak shows that colours are distributed across a range of wavelengths from 4000 Å to 7000 Å. Wave lengths that we do not see at all extend below 4000 Å and far above 7000 Å. At the left hand end blue first becomes visible at 4300, and the right hand end red ceases to be visible at 6900. The narrow band of bright blue has a sharp division line at 4800. The narrow band of bright yellow is at 5800, with not such sharp edges. Bright red ends sharply at 6450.

Orange ends fuzzily at 6050 and begins even more fuzzily at about 5840. Green ends with a yellowish hue from about 5600 up to 5790 in my opinion, and begins at 4910.

A photograph is not the colour we see. It tries to be, but it is an artefact. Its colours depend entirely on layers of emulsion. Its colours are a sort of consensus opinion. Photographic films vary between the companies that make them. The colours are never accurate. In fact how could they be "accurate" if colour perception depends on the individual concerned?

My question is, why did our eyes evolve to detect and discriminate colours at these wavelengths?

My answer came to me when I read that there is a background uv radiation in space with the specific wavelength of 1216 Å. Any specific concentrated wavelength creates "ripples" at other wavelengths. These are called harmonic wavelengths, and are simply multiples of the base wavelength. In the case of 1216 they are in the table below.

x1	x2	x3	x4	x5
1216	2432	3648	4864	6080

The x4 wavelength is 4864 which is right in the middle of the bright blue band. The x5 wavelength is 6080, right on the end of orange. If orange is a mix of yellow and red then you might say it is the end of yellow. So far so good. It seems highly unlikely to be a pure coincidence. I pursued the analogy with harmonics a bit further.

Harmonics and the origins of colour vision continues on Page 4.

I looked at the “musical” harmonics using 4864 as a base frequency.

The first three: x 1/1 is the “rest”, x 2/1 the octave, x 3/2 the “fifth”

The next three are in the table below.

x 4/3	x 5/4	x 6/5
6485 Å	6080 Å	5836 Å
Red/dark red	Orange/red	Yellow/orange

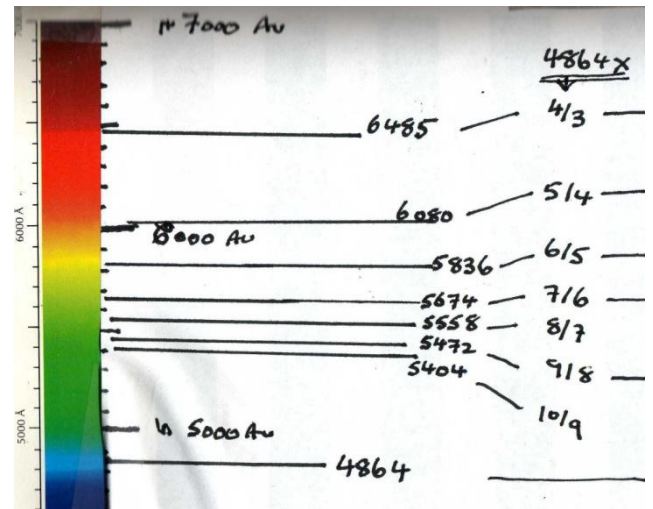

These are exact results as you can see in the picture (opposite). The remainder of the harmonic ratios all fall in the green. Perhaps 7/6 is the end of green/yellow and 8/7 the end of yellowy green/start of “green” itself.

Recently the earth has been protected from 1216 Å radiation, but scientist say there have been perhaps ten separate periods when it was not protected. Perhaps on these occasions many animals returned to living in water. I cannot resist pointing out that the Ancient Egyptians left us the sort of legacy that you might have expected from visiting cosmonauts.

The Giza and Saqqara pyramids have musical harmonic slopes. The Great Pyramid uses the mathematical constant “e”, the Megalithic Yard, as its unit of dimension, and its dimensions use the sum of five consecutive prime numbers. These things are cosmic invariants, they do not change wherever you are in the universe.

Harmonics are the basis of quantum energy, hence of the construction of the elements themselves. They form the musical “spiral of fifths” which has the mathematical form of DNA.

Book Review: The Dragons of Somerset and their Relation to Dragons of the World

By Roy Snelling

This ebook looks deeply into the myths, legends and folktales of dragons. The first part of the book examines twenty-two accounts of dragons in Somerset

In the next part of the book dragon stories are examined from all continents, in some cases going back into far antiquity. The Somerset dragons are then compared with dragons from around the World, under different headings such as: - eats people – has two legs – has many heads – kills hero – etc. to see if the Somerset beasts are part of a World-wide pattern.

Finally, the meaning behind the dragon stories and what they reveal about Man’s psyche and understanding of Life is examined, considering such things as a possible race memory of dinosaurs, the serpent Satan in the Bible, and Jung’s theories of Man’s symbols and archetypes in the collective unconscious. The ebook is available from Amazon, Kindle and all other ebook libraries.
