Reincarnation and the Akashic Records

By Marian Matthews

Re-incarnation, the belief that we all experience many life times, is now becoming more and more accepted in the western world. It has, of course been the mainstay of many ancient and Eastern religions for thousands of years. There is much anecdotal evidence, in near death and out of body experiences and in communication with the physically dead that some part of us, our soul consciousness or essence is detachable from the physical body. Many people are now convinced that we live many times. There are many books out there written about past life memories that have bled through into current lives. People have sometimes found evidence of their past lives, even tracking down places and people they have known in previous incarnations. I myself have past life memories coming up. I have been drowned in a cold northern sea. This memory came up in a Reiki session. The theory is that our souls do go on and jump from life, being reborn in a different physical body every time. We have all been many races, rich or poor, male and female, black and white and everything between.

This process does not seem to be random, however, there does seem to be an element of design and record keeping involved. The theory is that there are records kept on all souls, wherever they are incarnated. These are called the Akashic records. (Akasha- means air or sky or space or aether in Sanskrit).

The Akashic records

Akashic records are said to hold the energetic records of all souls, past present and possible futures, and some say our collective wisdom. They are said to be held in

Above: the multidimensional human being the non-physical plane of existence, outside of physical creation. The knowledge of their existence is not a new age phenomena, but is actually ancient wisdom

Where could they be kept?

They used to be generally thought of as a library of books, one for each life time per soul. Some sensitive people can access their records, usually in a meditative state. As they were envisaged to be in book form that is what people would see. Some people, though, who work with the spirit body, believe that this information is also encoded in our individual Auras.

Since both the development of computers and growth of understanding of the underlying nature of the universe, however, in particular the understanding of quantum mechanics and Zero Point Fields some people have been seeing them differently. They have been imagined as a computer data base. It is worth noting though, although mainstream and conventional science may regard the concept as non scientific, nevertheless some who are working with the quantum energies, (for instance, Ervin Laszlo-Science in the Akashic Field), believe that the energies of Zero Point Field underlies the fabric of space itself. These energies are seen as a life force flowing throughout the universe, they hold our collective consciousness and all the Akashic records of everyone in it. Reincarnation and the Akashic Records continues on Page 4.

Another view is that if we are all holograms anyway, which as beings made at base of nothing but energy, is a possibility, this may be the generating computer's data base. It is anyway, a universal information field. So the records are either, in a big book or data base in a library, or all around us bound in with all the energies of our universe, including our own. If they do exist their very existence has massive implications for the nature of our reality here on Earth, though. Physical creation, and our individual lives would not be random at all. There would be hints of planning, pre destination and a much more complex bigger picture than we can be aware of. There may be a structure, an organisation, beyond all of creation that is probably beyond our understanding.

An

In Sumerian mythology An is the personification of heaven. Unlike the Egyptian conception of their deities who are frequently represented under theriomorphic forms, the Mesopotamian gods are always shown in their human form though they are often accompanied by their sacred beasts. An early god like An simply remained a shadowy figure, the survivor of a creation myth. The symbol of An is the star.
