

Wessex Research Group Network Newsletter

VOLUME 11, ISSUE 9.

September 2016

September and we welcome the Exeter Lightworker Group to the Wessex Network. Based at the Friends [Quaker] Meeting House on Magdalen Street the group meets on Wednesdays. For further information about the group's activities, contact Mark on 07836 784302.

Glastonbury pagan moot celebrates the launch of its web site <http://glastonburymoot.catnip.uk> and Poole PLG has a new group co-ordinator; Adrian Oliver.

During the month ahead the Foundation for International Spiritual Unfoldment launches meditation in Brussels. The College of Psychic Studies welcomes speakers from Denmark and the USA. The college is also holding a special fundraising day for tutor Henry Cumming.

The latest addition to the on-line article archive is Units of Measurement in the Late Neolithic on the Moors around Ilkley, West Yorkshire by Peter Harris.

The Myth of the Great Serpent of Ohio

By George Essence

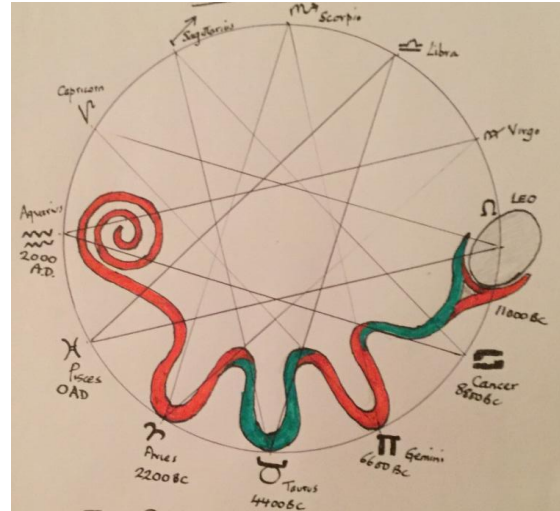

A myth of time lies in Stone Age monuments. It is the myth of Prometheus, man and fire. As a myth it was killed when the Stone Age died, but fortunately it revived in America. It eventually flourished in monuments such as the Great Serpent of Ohio, the first millennium AD. The myth begins in the "Old World", in the Caucasus 12000 years ago. It dies in Europe when the monuments fall into disuse, in the second millennium BC.

Myths are music, and do not die. Harmonic proportions link them to monuments. These proportions are like tidal flow, and link us to eternity.

Stonehenge [Wiltshire UK] and the Great Serpent of Ohio, two of the most famous monuments in the world, can be placed onto the same harmonic diagram, although they are 4,000 years apart. They belong to different Ages, the former [3000BC] belongs in Taurus, the latter [1,000AD] in Pisces.

The serpent is swallowing an egg from outer space. It is a Trojan Horse, hiding alien gods. They land at Gobekli Tepe in the Caucasus, in 11,000BC [the Age of Leo]. Avebury may well be a similar site. It represents a serpent and an egg. The main ring contains two circles, the rings at Gobelki contain two major stones.

The latitude of Avebury, which is exactly 1/7th of the circumference of the Earth, lies between those two inner circles. This fact, only recently discovered by satellite, is exactly where a "harmonic" serpent should be expected to lie, mathematically.

An enigmatic nod to "alien gods", who in the Time Myth, subsequently hatch out 4,000 years later into the Twin hero gods Gilgamesh and Enkidu [Catul-huyuk, 6,800BC, Age of Gemini].

Then 4,000 years later they reappear again in the form of King Sargon of Akkad [Aries 2,250BC]. Gods incarnating into Space-Time and the world has a three phase trans-morphism!

Sargon was the reincarnation of Gilgamesh as a mortal man. He fathered a new race of men, "Aryans", the race of the new Age of Aries the Ram. They were humans who "had" fire. That is, they are part mortal humans and part immortal alien god, a spirit that survives death and needs to escape from the Underworld; hence the myths of Orpheus, Gilgamesh and Prometheus. The Epic of Gilgamesh originated with Sargon.

The trilithons at Stonehenge [2250 BC] enclose an "egg" oriented towards Leo at the solstice sun rise. They are "Aryan", superimposed onto the existing monument. Aryans created the Iron Age. They invented monotheism to kill the time-myth, which they saw as competition. Monotheism is static. It denies the harmonic cycling of gods and time. However, Harmonic Time is a twin snake. The Aryans are in one snake, the myth is in the other.

In the myth of Zeus and Europa, they escape because Zeus becomes a swimming bull. In America, in the symbolic form of bull horns, the Time-Myth flourished everywhere from Alaska to Peru in the first millennium AD.

The Origins of Gods

By Nigel Blair

The practice of turning great historical figures into gods or demigods (heroes promoted like Hercules to semi-divine status) has been carried out by probably the great majority of ancient civilizations. It is entirely likely, therefore, that the same thing happened to the kings of Atlantis and of the various territories bordering the Atlantic which would once have been under its influence, including that north-west peninsula of Europe which became the British Isles.

Plato, however, warns us that the Atlantean names had been first turned into Egyptian by the Egyptian priests and then into Greek by himself, so that with the possible exception of the name Gadirus (Gadierus), whence comes Gadir (Gades) and probably Cadiz, the River Gadalquivir and Agadir, we do not have the original Atlantean names.

The description of the giant Cyclopes, to whom a number of ancient Greek writers including Diodorus Siculus and Homer refer, is very close to what we know of the Cro-Magnons, the original European immigrants from Atlantis. Both races were giants, and both dressed in animal-skins and lived in caves. There is evidence to suggest that they were widespread, the somewhat degenerate remnants of the original Atlantean racial type, which would explain why their remains have been found especially along the western European Atlantic coasts where Atlantean colonists, and later refugees, would have concentrated their settlements. Poseidon, who later became the Greek god of the sea was a sort of culture-bringer who arrived in Atlantis some hundreds of years before its submergence. Remember that, in Plato's "Critias", he is the founding god-king of Atlantis. He gave the ancient, and by then markedly decadent, Cro-Magnon civilization there something of a renewal.

He was arguably the leader of the Azilians. They were a known advanced Stone-Age culture of Western Europe in the late Ice Age epoch that may have conquered Atlantis. We certainly know from their remains that they were a seafaring race, could easily have got there, and would undoubtedly have given a top position to a sea-god — or a maritime hero, perhaps in the Viking style, who would later have become deified.

The seafaring genius of the Azilians is indirectly confirmed by the usual description of Poseidon as a god of Pelasgian origin. In some legends he was in fact the father of Pelasgus, the mythical ancestor of the Pelasgians, sometimes significantly referred to as the "man from the sea". Be this as it may, this somewhat enigmatic ancient Greek word occurs widely in their literature to characterize the earliest peoples of their country, and also as far afield as Asia Minor, Crete, Tyrrhenia (northern Italy), and the Aegean coasts generally. The Greeks used the word in a general sense, to include at different times both early Hellenes (the classical Greek race) and earlier little-known races who were in Greece when the Hellenes arrived, and intermixed with them.

The Pelasgians of ancient Greece and Crete had a legend that their gods came from an unknown race from a distant western continent, which probably means either America or Atlantis. They settled in the Aegean area at the same time as the pre-Egyptians in the Nile Valley: and represented a third wave of migrants from Atlantis that arrived in Western Europe.
