The Chartres Round Table

By Roy Snelling

Chartres, specifically the site of the present Cathedral, was a Holy place for the Celts of Ancient Gaul long before the Roman conquest of Gaul. Sacred and religious use of the site probably goes back nearly 3,000 years. Under the Crypt of the present Cathedral there is an Under-Crypt that is the remains of a Celtic Temple. It is believed that the Celtic Temple was dedicated to the Earth-Mother, in the form of a young woman who was about to give birth. It is also believed that the Druids at Chartres would have had a statue of a Black Earth-Mother at this site as a focus for veneration and worship. With the Roman occupation the Temple was used by officers in the Roman Army for the practising of the rituals of the Cult of Mithraism.

The first Christian use of the site goes back to the 6th Century when there was an altar dedicated to Mary, Mother of Jesus (not of the Christos!). Since the middle of the 8th Century the Cathedral Church has been wholly or partially destroyed and rebuilt on a number of occasions. The medieval stone-masons guilds of Europe are thought to have possessed certain secrets of geomancy, such as the Golden Rectangle, which they used in the design and construction of many churches and cathedrals. It is possible that these secrets were passed to them by the Knights Templar. The Knights Templar almost certainly had a hand in the design of the most important Marian cathedral in Europe. Chartres is dedicated to 'Notre Dame'.

Chartres is the dominant power centre (or Earth-chakra) of the whole of Western Europe. It stands at the juncture of twenty power lines that are part of the Earth's energetic matrix (the Planetary Matrix or Planetary Grid is a psychic pattern embedded within the Etheric Body of the Earth).

We studied maps of France and Europe looking for alignments, tracing overlays of the various figures placing over Chartres. One by one, and it was found that the hexagram star picked up six lines! In rotating the hexagram 30° it became apparent that there was another hexagram that picked up other important sites. In other words there was a twelve-pointed star based upon Chartres.

Lines running beyond this second hexagram, but in alignment with the 'spokes' of such, also aligned with major cities. To find the size of the Chartres landscape temple, compasses were used on a plan of Europe and it came to light that, at a certain circumference, a number of cities lay, within a reasonable margin of error, equidistant from Chartres. Others lay upon the circumference ring but between two of the twelve star-lines. Plymouth, Gloucester, Norwich, Leiden, Bonn, Strasbourg, Basel, Lausanne, Cahors, Bordeaux and Brest. A number of these were actually on lines from Chartres. From these the twelve-pointed star could be constructed. In the case of four apexes where there were no major cities, we nevertheless had lines passing through to major cities further out: Berlin, Tunis, Barcelona and Madrid. In one case where there was an apex terminus, Strasbourg, the projected line extended out to Vienna.

It is remarkable that this Chartres figure picks up so many important sites, particularly as four of them are National capitals of countries that were to play a major role in shaping Europe's history over the last thousand years.

Book Review. The Genius of the Few. The Story of Those who founded the Garden in Eden

By Christian O'Brien & Barbara Joy O'Brien

First published in 1985 this remarkable book has stood both the test of time and peer review to become a classic amongst specialists in the human origin subjects. As archaeological science has broadened its base to cover many new and exciting disciplines, it is primarily the solid evidence on the origins and spread of agriculture and pastoralism, genetics and language, which take us with some confidence with the O'Briens to Southern Lebanon before 8,000 BC

Some ancient historians did refer to the Elohim by name, but we have never been sure who was responsible for the spectacular agricultural production, monumental structures and the resulting highly organised city states, which would now appear to have existed throughout the fertile area and as far back as 8,000 BC at Jericho and Baalbek.

Here we can identify our distant relatives, who delivered from elsewhere a comprehensive agricultural package and much more, which transformed our planet and the lives of its inhabitants.

Further information about this book is can be found on the website of the Golden Age Project www.goldenageproject.org.uk as well as at www.amazon.co.uk

It would seem that, centred upon Chartres, we have an Arthurian Round Table, with its twelve knights in different parts of Western Europe. Or we have the Round Table of the Cosmic or Solar Christ, with his twelve Cosmic Masters, centred upon Chartres! Or we might even have a giant European Zodiac. It is significant that Chartres Cathedral, which is on the primary distributor Tetrahedron "Giza" Line, is dedicated to "Notre Dame", Our Lady, or in other words Mary or Maria. The word Maria is derived from "Ma-ia" or "Ma-Ea". Ma (pronounced "Mah") is the cosmic universal feminine energy; Ea (pronounced "Eh-ah") is the Earth. So Maea is the feminine Earth or Earth-Mother. Some Authorities state that the name should be Maia after the Earth Goddess of the Ancient Greeks (Mother of the seven Pleiades) and also the name Maya of the ancient Meso-American peoples.
